Brief Description of Indirect-Heating Shaft Furnace:

The Indirect-Heating Shaft Furnace is used for the multi-application of solid carbonaceous fuels such as coal/biomass/other potential carbonaceous feedstock through the thermal process. The Indirect-Heating shaft furnace should be working in a vertical plane and dimensions are ~5000×1500×2000(mm) (height×length×width). The Indirect-Heating shaft furnace consists of one (01) pyrolysis chamber having dimensions ~5000×500×250(mm) (height×length×width) and two (02) firing chambers having dimensions each of ~5000×500×250(mm) (height×length×width). The shaft furnace's orientation is such that the pyrolysis chamber is sandwiched by the firing chamber from both sides.

The feeding arrangement should provide a Motorized Electrical Hoist, a Hopper capacity of ~500 kg along with one sector gate valve, and one fuel vessel with a capacity of ~150 kg along with two cup & cone valves.

The material of construction for the pyrolysis chamber is best to heat conducting refractory suitable to maintain temperature up to 1100 °C inside the pyrolysis chamber and pressure up to 1 kg/cm<sup>2</sup> and negative pressure will be maintained. Throughout the height of the pyrolysis chamber, there should be a firing chamber on both sides to pass heated flue gases. The Pyrolysis chamber is provided with a safety valve nozzle, rupture disc nozzle, ~10 nos. of thermo well for thermocouples and ~4 nos. of spare nozzles, ~6 nos. of quartz or suitable sight glass, etc.

There are 4 oil burners (2 nos. on each side) used for indirect heating of the pyrolysis chamber inside the furnace. The furnace should be fed from the top inlet with a proper solid fuel distribution arrangement inside the pyrolysis chamber. The pyrolysis chamber is provided with inert gas and steam purging nozzles at the top and middle sections, respectively. The cone-shaped outlet is provided at the bottom of the retort to withdraw the product. The bottom outlet should be placed above the chain conveyor to transfer product from the pyrolysis chamber. The bottom of the retort should be sealed with the water seal tank and the water seal tank is connected with the settling tank to settle the small particulates. It helps to lower the temperature of the product along with produced gases and further the water will be recirculated by using a circulation pump.

The spherical-shaped dome is provided with a sprinkler on the top side of the water seal tank to remove the product gases and water vapor after that tri-lobe booster blower along with a flare stack of a capacity of ~ 300 Nm<sup>3</sup>/h is required for flaring the gases. One manually operated damper should be provided at the bottom of the pyrolysis chamber to remove the solid char as a by-product. One VFD-operated water-immersed chain conveyor should be provided to remove the product from the water seal tank. The generated flue gas is passed from both the firing chamber to the Flue Gas Chimney. After cleaning the pyrolyzed gases in the Dome section at the bottom of the pyrolysis chamber, the generated pyrolyzed gases flow toward the existing flare stack by using a Tri-lobe Booster blower.
